KEY RISKS AND RISK MANAGEMENT

You should not invest in this Fund if you do not understand or are not comfortable with the accompanying risks.

Credit Risk/Default Risk. The possibility for an investor to experience losses due to a borrower's failure to pay principal and/or interest in a timely manner on instruments such as bonds, loans, or other forms of security which the borrower issued.

Reinvestment Risks. The risk associated with the possibility of having lower returns or earnings when maturing funds or the interest earnings of funds are reinvested.

Interest Rate Risk. This is the possibility for an investor to experience losses due to changes in interest rates.

Inflation Risk. The risk that the value of investment is lower than the rate by which the prices of goods and services go up.

- The Fund implements a risk management policy that applies the principles of Value-at-Risk (VaR). VaR is a measure of the likely volatility of earnings due to rate fluctuations in the market. It is defined as a statistical estimate of the amount of loss that an "open" risk position is unlikely to exceed during a given time period with a given level of confidence.

FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

Global economic developments in April played out according to script. The Eurozone continued to languish, China showed more signs of slowing down and the U.S. churned out relatively good data. Relying purely on monetary policy to revive the bloc's economy, the European Central Bank's (ECB) efforts could prove futile as it turns a blind eye on fiscal stimulation. Indeed, negative interest rates might actually do more harm than good. Although expanding Quantitative Easing to cover corporate bonds and collateralized debt instruments might help a bit, the ECB should have done all of these five years ago. Now, these measures may be too little, too late.

China, for its part, had been successful in stabilizing its financial markets. But its decades-long, unimpeded, double-digit growth rate must have created credit- and asset-bubbles along the way. Nascent signs of this have already begun to manifest with a spate of defaults from large companies. And because corporate China's leverage is one of the highest in the world, corporate profits cannot be robust if firms have to pay out mountainous debts in the absence of external demand. The 6.7% Q1 Sino-GDP growth, thus, may need validation.

Things were different, however, in the U.S. as jobless claims fell to their lowest level since 1973. For all intents and purposes, the U.S. is already at or very near full-employment. Still, the Federal Reserve refrained from raising its key policy rates due to the rather wobbly global economy and a very mediocre Q1 U.S. GDP growth. It strongly signified, however, that a rate rise is warranted in succeeding meetings.

On local shores, there is a strong case to expect robust 1Q2016 economic growth. Even though exports dropped 4.5% in February, factory output grew by 8.4%, indicating strong domestic demand. This was supported by healthy OFW remittances, which grew by 6.1% in the first 2 months and a thriving BPO sector. And with government and the elections providing a big boost to retail spending, it is mathematically impossible to have modest growth. Finally, the milder than expected agricultural damage caused by el niño will certainly help push Q1 economic expansion within the vicinity of 6.5 to 6.7%.

VIEW STRATEGY

We shall maximize our placements in BSP-SDA (which is expected to be eventually replaced with Term Deposit Facility) and in different high yielding deposits, particularly in LTNCDs.
