KEY RISKS AND RISK MANAGEMENT

You should not invest in this Fund if you do not understand or are not comfortable with the accompanying risks.

Credit Risk/Default Risk. The possibility for an investor to experience losses due to a borrower's failure to pay principal and/or interest in a timely manner on instruments such as bonds, loans, or other forms of security which the borrower issued.

Reinvestment Risks. The risk associated with the possibility of having lower returns or earnings when maturing funds or the interest earnings of funds are reinvested.

Interest Rate Risk. This is the possibility for an investor to experience losses due to changes in interest rates.

Inflation Risk. The risk that the value of investment is lower than the rate by which the prices of goods and services go up.

- The Fund implements a risk management policy that applies the principles of Value-at-Risk (VAR). VaR is a measure of the likely volatility of earnings due to rate fluctuations in the market. It is defined as a statistical estimate of the amount of loss that an "open" risk position is unlikely to exceed during a given time period with a given level of confidence.

FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

There were quite a number of economic headlines that came out in June but nothing remotely as shocking as the "Brexit" vote. Short for British Exit from the European Union (EU), the decision to exit was placed squarely on the British people via referendum. In the days leading to the polls, surveys had the "remain" vote by a slight margin because of the enormity of the damage a "leave" vote would entail compared to just minor inconveniences of staying in the Union. But to everyone's disbelief and consternation, Brexit would prevail. The vote instantly sent shockwaves to virtually every financial market in the world. Oil immediately sank and the British Pound lost over 10% of its value in just one day.

An introspection of the repercussions of Brexit is quite unnerving. The most obvious consequence is that the U.K. (the fifth largest economy in the world) will lose the privilege of tariff-free trade with the rest of the EU member states. With almost 50% of its exports bound for the EU periphery, the jolt to the U.K.'s economy would be nothing short of devastating. The EU will also be adversely affected as the U.K. is the bloc's single largest export destination, accounting for 16% of shipments. And if the EU gets dragged, it is a cinch the Eurozone would also fall. Growing at just 0.3%, it wouldn't take a lot to cast Euroland back into recession. And the frightening thing is that the European Central Bank (ECB) is out of bullets, having already exhausted all monetary tools. Nothing more can be done about it.

There are many other uncertainties and dire implications. For instance, what will happen to U.S. direct investments in the U.K.? American companies have pumped in $765 billion into the U.K. to gain access to the EU single market with its population of 380 million. For sure, a lot of companies will pack up and relocate to other EU member countries. An upsurge in unemployment will be inevitable. This is just the tip of the iceberg. A lot of collateral damage will sprout all over the world. A case in point is Japan, which would be hard-pressed to maintain its economic momentum after the fear factor resulting from Brexit has instigated flight to safety. As one of the safe haven assets, the Japanese Yen has strengthened so much that all efforts of the Bank of Japan to weaken the currency have been rendered useless.

The Philippines, for now, has been hanging tough. Although the country's direct trade ties with the U.K. are very minimal, globalization will eventually affect the country. The Brexit dilemma will just take a lot of detours before finally hitting local shores. That being the case, the Philippines will be one of the last economies standing, should Brexit prove to be a "black swan" event.

VIEW STRATEGY

We shall optimize the Fund yield by maximizing the investment in BSP-TDF and ODF, while continue looking for LTNCDS being offered in the secondary market, to further increase and improve the Fund value.
