FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The Monetary Board decided to reduce policy interest rates by 25 basis points in May, bringing the overnight reverse repurchase (RRP) facility to 4.5%. The decision was based on a manageable inflation outlook as price pressures continued to ease on lower food prices and improved supply conditions. However, notable upside pressures to the consumer price index could stem from the prolonged El Niño and higher than expected global oil prices. To the downside, weaker global economic prospects could temper commodity price pressures. Meanwhile, despite domestic activity expected to remain firm as supported by the recovery in both household and government spending, real sector activity has notably moderated in the first quarter. Dull growth prospects both in the domestic and global scene will have to be monitored closely. With this, monetary policy settings were deemed appropriate for the time being. The main policy rate was left steady in the succeeding meeting in June. The prudent pause will allow the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas to assess the impact of current monetary policy adjustments including the programmed reserve requirement ratio (RRR) reductions to be completed by the end of July 2019. Nonetheless, the market is still expecting interest rate cuts by the BSP as the outlook turns decidedly dovish.

VIEW STRATEGY

Fund investment is in banks high yielding deposits maximizing available tenors with best returns. Other alternative investment is short-dated bank LTNCDs with better yields than deposits.
