KEY RISKS AND RISK MANAGEMENT

You should not invest in this Fund if you do not understand or are not comfortable with the accompanying risks.

Credit Risk/Default Risk. The possibility for an investor to experience losses due to a borrower's failure to pay principal and/or interest in a timely manner on instruments such as bonds, loans, or other forms of security which the borrower issued.

Reinvestment Risks. The risk associated with the possibility of having lower returns or earnings when maturing funds or the interest earnings of funds are reinvested.

Interest Rate Risk. This is the possibility for an investor to experience losses due to changes in interest rates.

Inflation Risk. The risk that the value of investment is lower than the rate by which the prices of goods and services go up.

- The Fund implements a risk management policy that applies the principles of Value-at-Risk (VaR). VaR is a measure of the likely volatility of earnings due to rate fluctuations in the market. It is defined as a statistical estimate of the amount of loss that an "open" risk position is unlikely to exceed during a given time period with a given level of confidence.

FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The global economy continued to show signs of weakness in March, in particular, the world's second largest economy. (This, of course goes without saying that the Eurozone is still in dire straits, prompting the U.K. to opt exiting the currency union.) China's exports as of February fell by the most in seven years. Apart from this, credit bubbles are starting to manifest after China's third largest property developer signaled hardships in servicing a $600 billion bond flotation, sending its bond yield sharply higher. This also caused Chinese credit default swaps (CDS) to soar, even exceeding prices of Philippine CDS. And although world crude oil prices seemed to have finally found solid footing, the Federal Reserve has deemed that the state of the global economy was way too precarious for it to go ahead with monetary tightening; hence, the U.S. central bank kept its policy rates steady in its March meeting. From the minutes of its meeting, it may be inferred that the Federal Reserve has departed from its hawkish proclivities and would likely be dovish in terms of monetary policy this year.

As for the Philippines, the country's economic performance appeared to be in much better shape than that of the global economy. Although plagued by myriads of external threats, the domestic economy is poised to register a 1Q2016 growth rate near to (or in excess of) 6%. This may be gleaned from the generally robust Q1 corporate earnings of listed firms. Also, the Filipino consumer must have had sufficient discretionary income and a fair amount of spending power after inflation was registered at just 1.1% in March. Moreover, earlier fears of a drastic slowdown in OFW remittances may have been unfounded; this, after January repatriations reached $2.2 billion. This certainly bodes well for the country as consumer spending accounts for 70% of economic output. And with election spending complementing the government's massive infrastructure outlay, there is very little reason to believe that Q1 economic expansion would be tepid. There is definitely more than one reason to hold on tight to optimism.

VIEW STRATEGY

While we wanted to increase the Fund's LTNCD holdings to further improve the portfolio yield, such issues are relatively scarce both in the primary and secondary markets. Given this limitation, we shall maximize our placements in BSP-SDA (which is expected to be eventually replaced with Term Deposit Facility) and in different high yielding deposits.
