FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The main storyline for the month of September was the Federal Reserve's (the "Fed") decision to keep policy rates on hold. The verdict, however, was not reached unanimously by any means. Financial markets were just about evenly split about the issue. It just so happened that the latest U.S. economic data released prior to the FOMC meeting were disappointments. Factory Output, Consumer Spending and Services Output figures all fell below street estimates. Even then, there were three dissensions from the voting members – the first time it happened in five years. Had the economic data matched estimates, the Fed may very well have hiked rates already. In any case, the U.S. central bank is still bent on raising rates at least once this year. In all likelihood, it will be in December.

Elsewhere on the globe, China appeared to have regained some resilience after industrial production, investments and retail sales showed improvements. Still, the presence of credit and asset bubbles all over the place, are things investors need to carefully consider. And the Eurozone ... well, it has shown a semblance of stability but remains to be a powder keg especially with the consequences of Brexit expected to affect the bloc soon with a very ill-equipped European Central Bank.

Back home, the economy is in much better shape than most of the world. The 6.9% H1 GDP growth rate would likely be sustained on the back of strong domestic demand with Consumer Confidence hitting an all-time high in Q3. And although domestic money supply (M3) expanded by 11.8% to P8.7 trillion as of July (latest available figure), inflation remained tame at just 1.8%. Also, a remarkable development unfolded in an area where the Philippines traditionally lagged its ASEAN neighbors – Foreign Direct Investments (FDI) almost doubled in the first half from a year ago. This translates to more jobs. Be that as it may, the economic fairy tale of the country would not play out without wicked witches and trolls. Firstly, the external sector is getting challenged, with the current account shrinking as OFW remittances wane. Secondly, inflation could start to creep up with OPEC agreeing to production cuts. Last but not least, the country's foreign policy and new brand of diplomacy could turn out to be the country's worst bogeyman if friendly relations with developed Western economies are severed.

VIEW STRATEGY

The Fund strategy is to maximize exposure in BSP Time Deposit Facilities taking advantage of its high interest rates. Other alternative investments are high yielding deposits offered by other banks and medium-term LTNCDs offered in the secondary markets that contribute growth in Fund returns.
